Highlights from Dallas Art Fair 2015

April 10, 2015

"The Dallas Art Fair is in its seventh year, and it continues to ferment its own strange brew of hip, blue-chip, and homegrown" – SCOTT INDRISEK

Dallas Art Fair Kicks Off with a Herd of Early Sales

April 10, 2015

"If the preview gala was any indication of the sales forecast at the four-day fair, then things are off to a good start... Most galleries reported positive results on the fair's first full day too, starting off with at least one sale... With momentum strong, if things continue at pace for the remaining three days of the fair, it's safe to say that the Lone Star State will have delivered on its larger-than-life promise" – ANN BINLOT

Highlights from the 2015 Dallas Art Fair

April 15, 2015

"Young artists ruled the scene at the up-and-coming art fair."

"Over the past weekend, the art world migrated to south for the 7th annual Dallas Art Fair. A relative newcomer to the scene, the fair has become a destination for emerging and established mid-range galleries that are eager to connect with the city's tight-knit young collector community led by local tastemakers like Justine Ludwig and Robyn Siegel as well as mega-hitters like famed Dallas arts patron Marguerite Hoffman."

Dallas Arts Week: Where the Art World meets Southern Hospitality

April 15, 2015

"Like its many counterparts around the world, the week is filled with wealthy collectors, art dealers, artists, museum directors, art writers, and the like, champagne, exclusive events, late-night revelry and well, art. But unlike Miami Beach, London, New York or any of the other locations that have similar festivities, there's just something about that southern hospitality that creates a tight-knit, community feel. For one thing the amount of events are manageable, and its denizens welcome the art world with open arms and the usually insular art crowd opens up, making for one week filled with sales, exhibitions and lots of Southern fun." – ANN BINLOT

Don't Mess With Texas Art Fairs: On Dallas During a Week of Auctions and Openings

April 16, 2015

"It's a city where an unending stream of openings and loft parties and after-parties attended by an impressive number of visiting New Yorkers signaled the arrival of Dallas to the must-attend art world circuit." – NATE FREEMAN

Auctions, Galas, and 10-Gallon Hats: A Preview Look at Dallas Art Week

April 8, 2015

"Dallas may initially make you think of oilmen and cowboy boots and rodeos and the like, and that's fine, but—surprise!—it's also a world-class, super cosmopolitan capital of Contemporary art. The Dallas Art Fair—and the constellation of museum opening, galas, auctions, performances and general rowdiness that accompany it—has gotten bigger each year, with more New York galleries (and New York collectors) coming down than ever. You could probably say the Contemporary art scene in Dallas has become, well, Texas-sized. There's an exciting game-changing group of Dallas-based collectors, and the city's institutions can rival that of any other metropolises of similar size and even the NFL stadium has a remarkable collection of installation work."
"Let's face it, dealers and gallery directors don't have it all that great at fairs. But when you bring up Dallas with a dealer at a gallery that's going, their eyes light up—this is a fair where they can let their hair down."
– NATE FREEMAN

What Went Down in Dallas

April 15, 2015

"In its seventh year, Dallas Art Fair has swelled into a destination fair. And even in Texas, that doesn't mean just bigger. It is an excess of all things: shinier names, deeper pockets, longer nights" – FAN ZHONG

<http://www.wmagazine.com/culture/art-and-design/2015/04/dallas-art-fair-2/photos/>

Dallas Art Fair Lures Designers, Clients

April 15, 2015

"I'm very surprised and delighted by what's going on in Dallas with the arts scene. It's very cool, very interesting. There was a great vibe, great energy last night at the Art Fair." – LISA PERRY

"The growth of the Dallas Art Fair alone – from 35 art dealers seven years ago to 95 this year – is an indication of how the cultural life of the city of Dallas is thriving. Not too many years back, the idea of creating a nationally recognized Dallas Art Week would have been considered highly unlikely. It is very exciting to see Dallas' museums, cultural institutions and businesses unite to offer such a rich experience and draw national interest in our art scene." – JIM GOLD

Destination: Dallas

April 2015

"The fair itself boasts its biggest edition yet, snagging first time heavy hitters like Maccarone (showing Carol Bove, Paul Lee, and others) and Galerie Perrotin (Bernard Frize, Jesus Rafael Soto)." – SCOTT INDRISEK

DESTINATION
DALLAS

THE EXHIBITIONS and festivities surrounding this year's Dallas Art Fair (April 9-12) might cause some geographic disorientation, as a show of New York (and one famous Brit) come to the Texas city. At Dallas Contemporary, blockbuster artist Nate Lowman shares the cavernous space with David Salle, who will be showing a series of recent paintings, along with recent works. The Guggenheim Foundation sponsors the annual ARTx Dallas gala—a fund-raiser for both Dallas Contemporary and the Blanton Art Foundation—which includes an auction of work by the likes of Zoe Cooker and Ross Gayden, a live performance by I.D. (aka Laci Bougasos and Sadio Laskis), and a blockbuster celebration of Michael Craig-Martin, who will have sculptures installed in various venues around Dallas. At the Power Station, Belgian duo duo de Grayer and Harald Thry will bring a series of their haunting, surrealistic-like projects to the covered, industrial space. Upstart gallery And Now brings Lowman and Dan Colón for a show that opens on April 7. Nasher Sculpture Center has a survey of local metal sculptures by Marko Eskandari on view through July 30. At the Dallas Museum of Art, take a survey of Great artists Kazuo Shiraga and Shigeo Fukuda, as well as a survey of work by Belgian painter Michel Dermomont.

The fair itself boasts its biggest edition yet, snagging first-time heavy hitters like Maccarone (showing Carol Bove, Paul Lee, and others) and Galerie Perrotin (Bernard Frize, Jesus Rafael Soto). While in town, stay at the art-focused Jovale Hotel—a luxury property, located downtown, with works by Andrew Kuo and an unimpeachably clean vibe. Tony Tasset's massive "Erbil" sculpture awaits at the street. And consider a visit in early May, when the multi-talented Bohème Festival joins the Dallas Symphony Orchestra with artists like Alex Proyer and Popkiss! Koi. —ET
